Mr. Pepo and the Not-So-Spooky Night

A Halloween Special

A bedtime story by Peter Slizik

Mr. Pepo and the Not-So-Spooky Night

A Halloween Special

A bedtime story by

Peter Slizik

☾ ✦ ✦

Mr. Pepo and the Not-So-Spooky Night
Text and illustrations © Peter Slizik. All rights reserved.
No part of this book may be reproduced without written permission from the author.
Mr. Pepo Stories · A Halloween Special

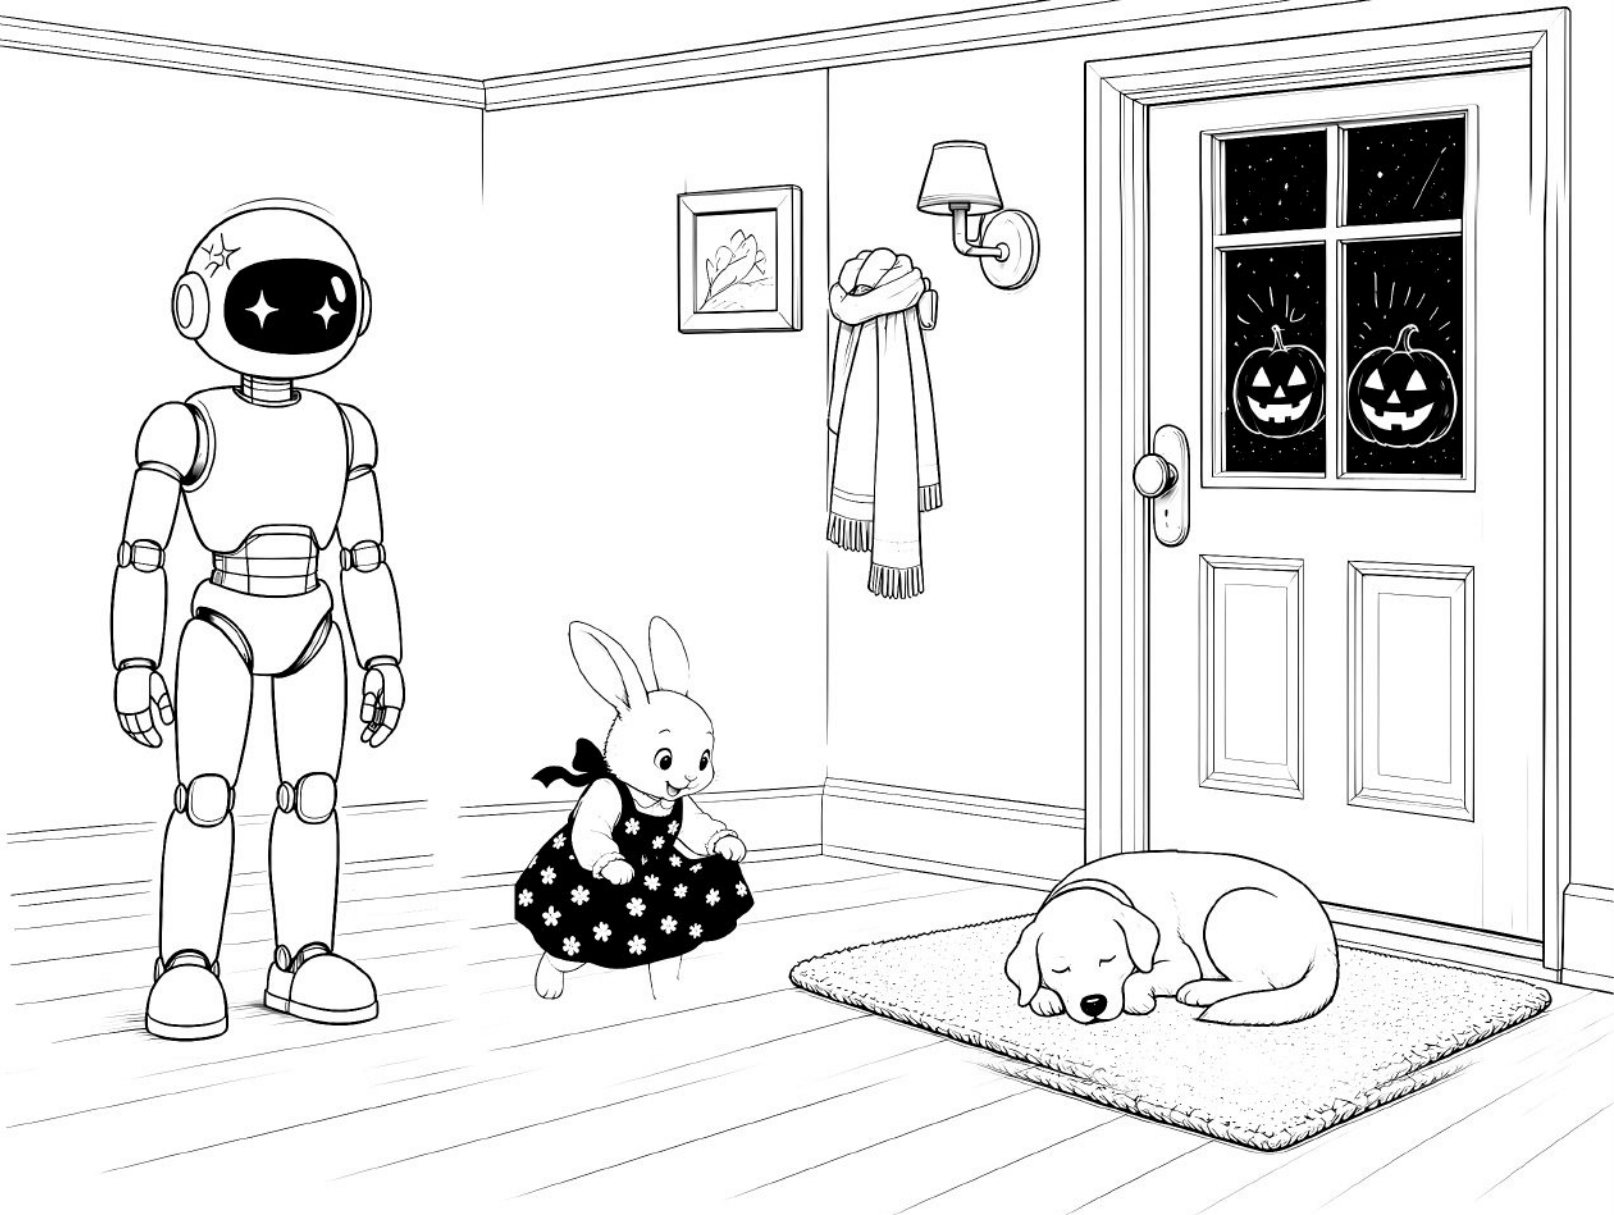

It was Halloween night at the little brick house on the quiet street.

Purple fairy lights twinkled along the brick wall, and the old lantern by the garage glowed soft and gold.

Mr. Pepo had carved a row of friendly pumpkins, and each one smiled a warm, glowing smile.

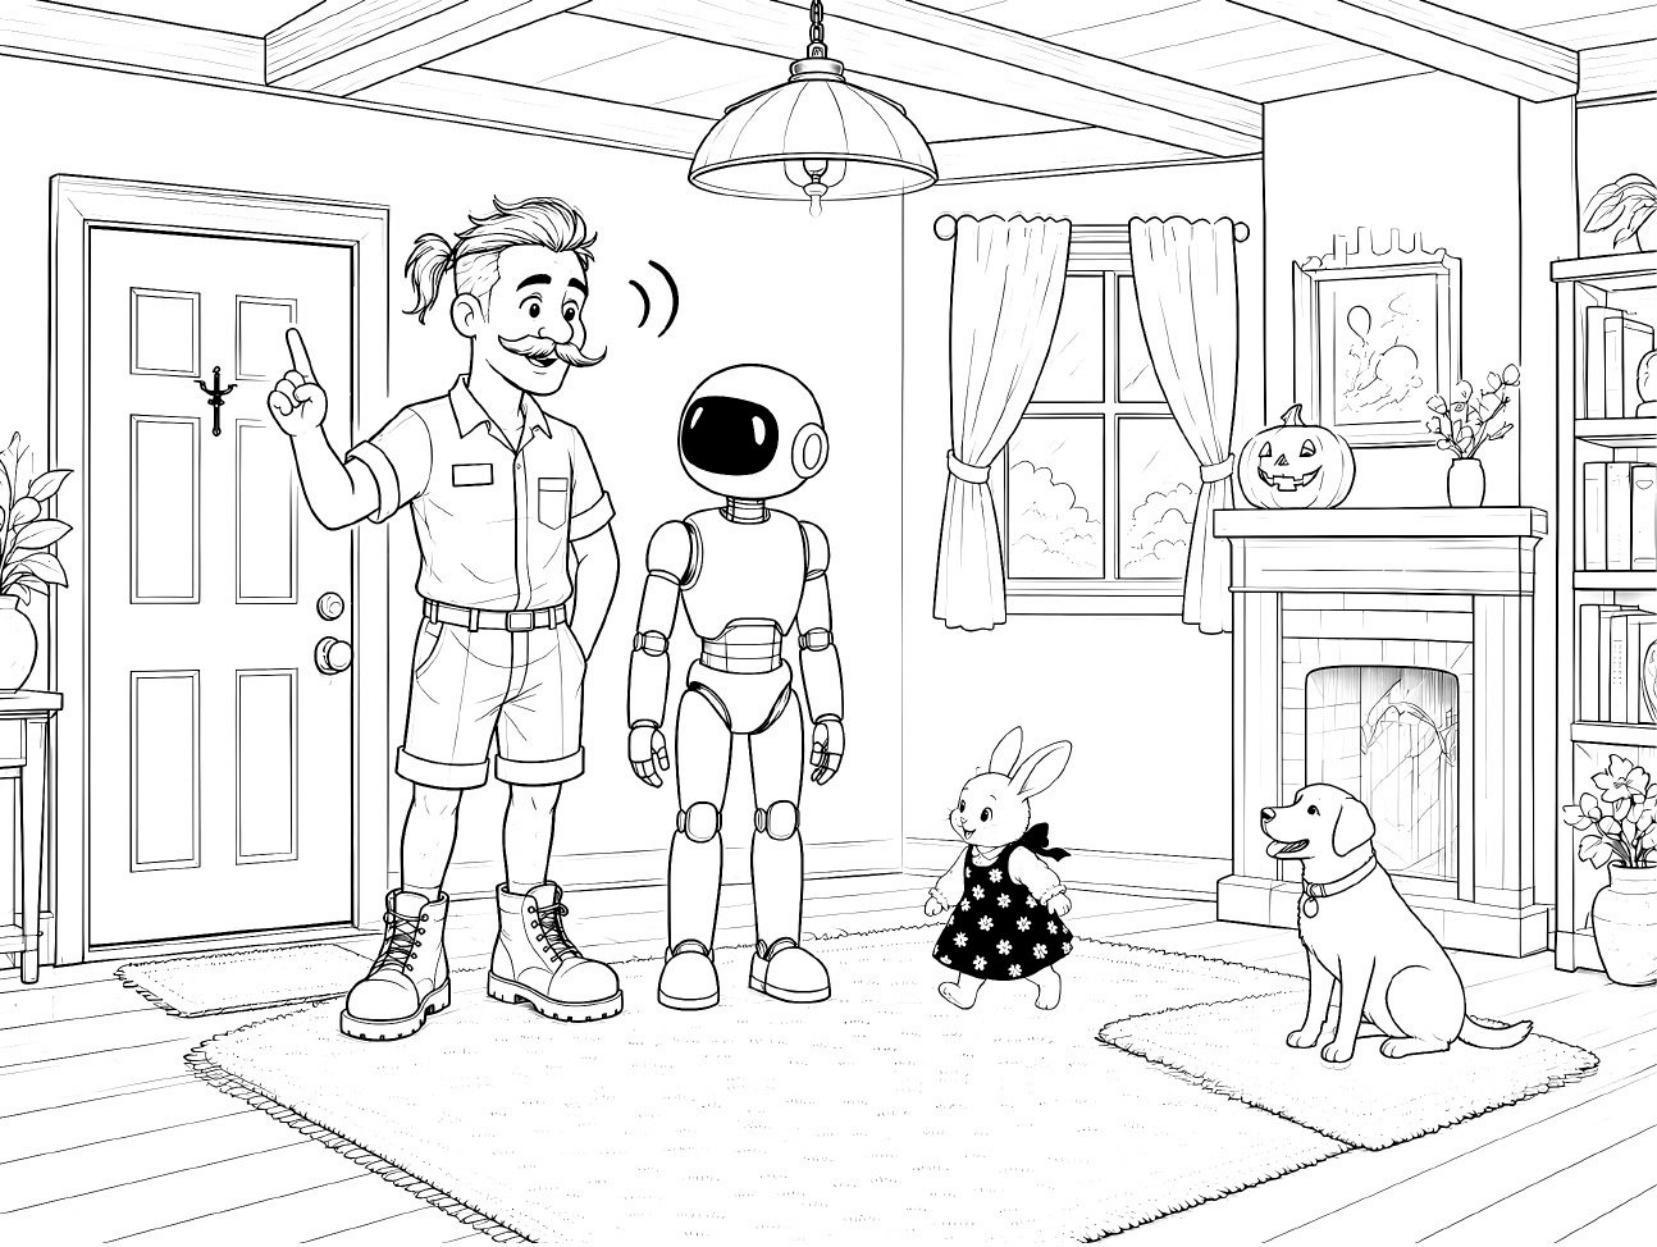

Luna the kind robot let her visor lights flicker. Little Howie smoothed her navy daisy dress. Little Sakura curled up on the chair by the door.

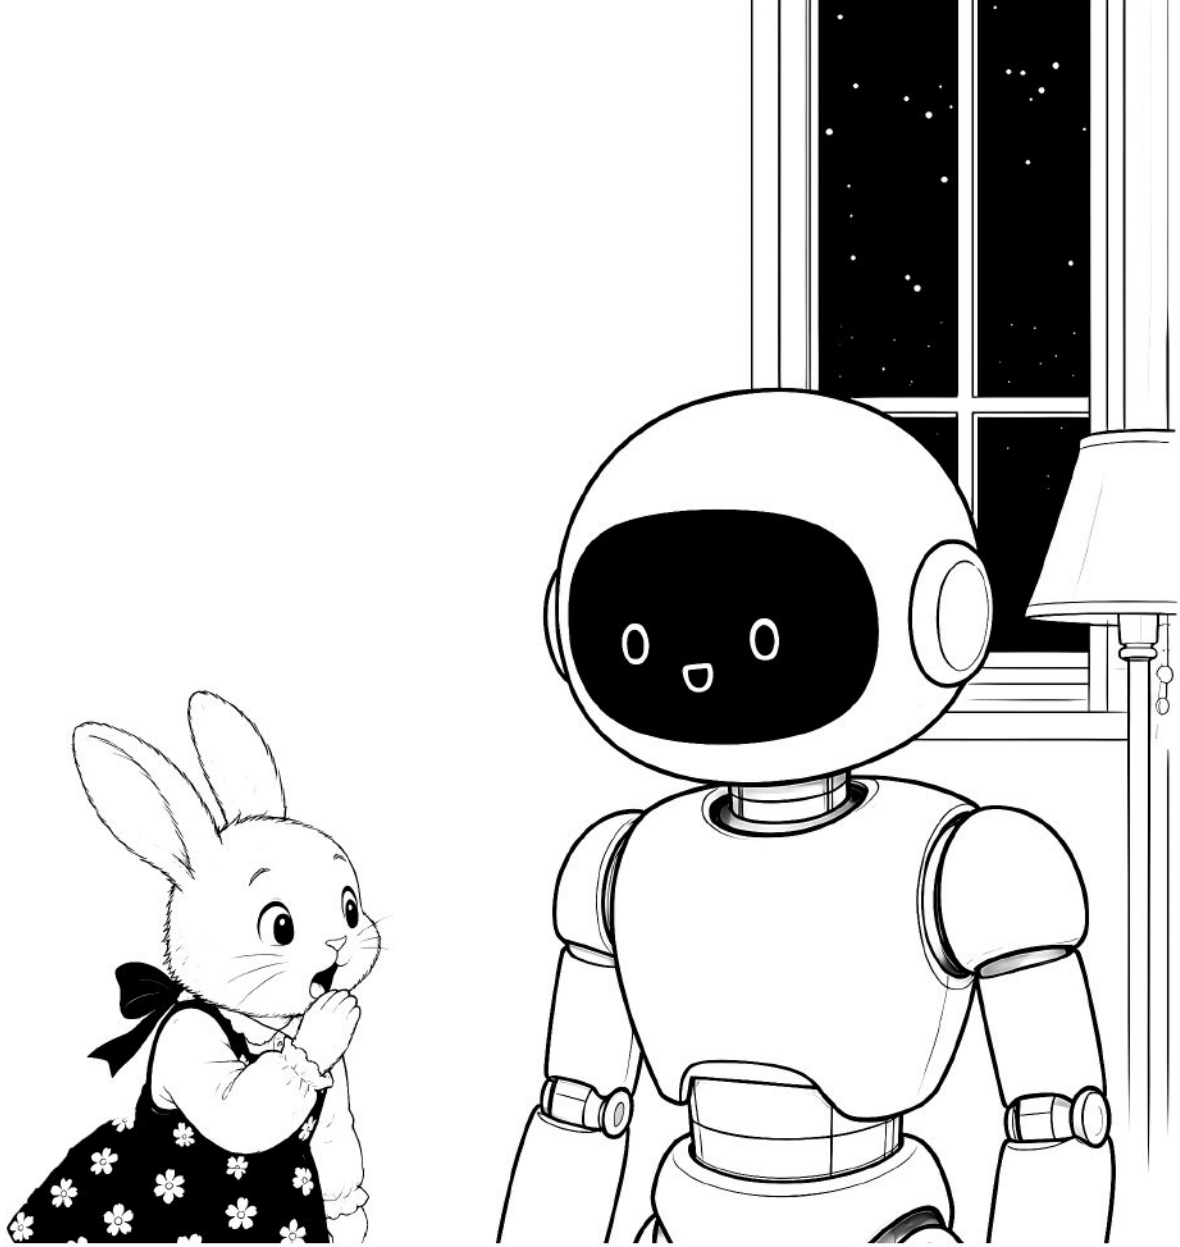

In the window, the toy rockets hung quietly, pointing up at the stars.

On the wall, the Mr. Pepo poster smiled down at everyone.

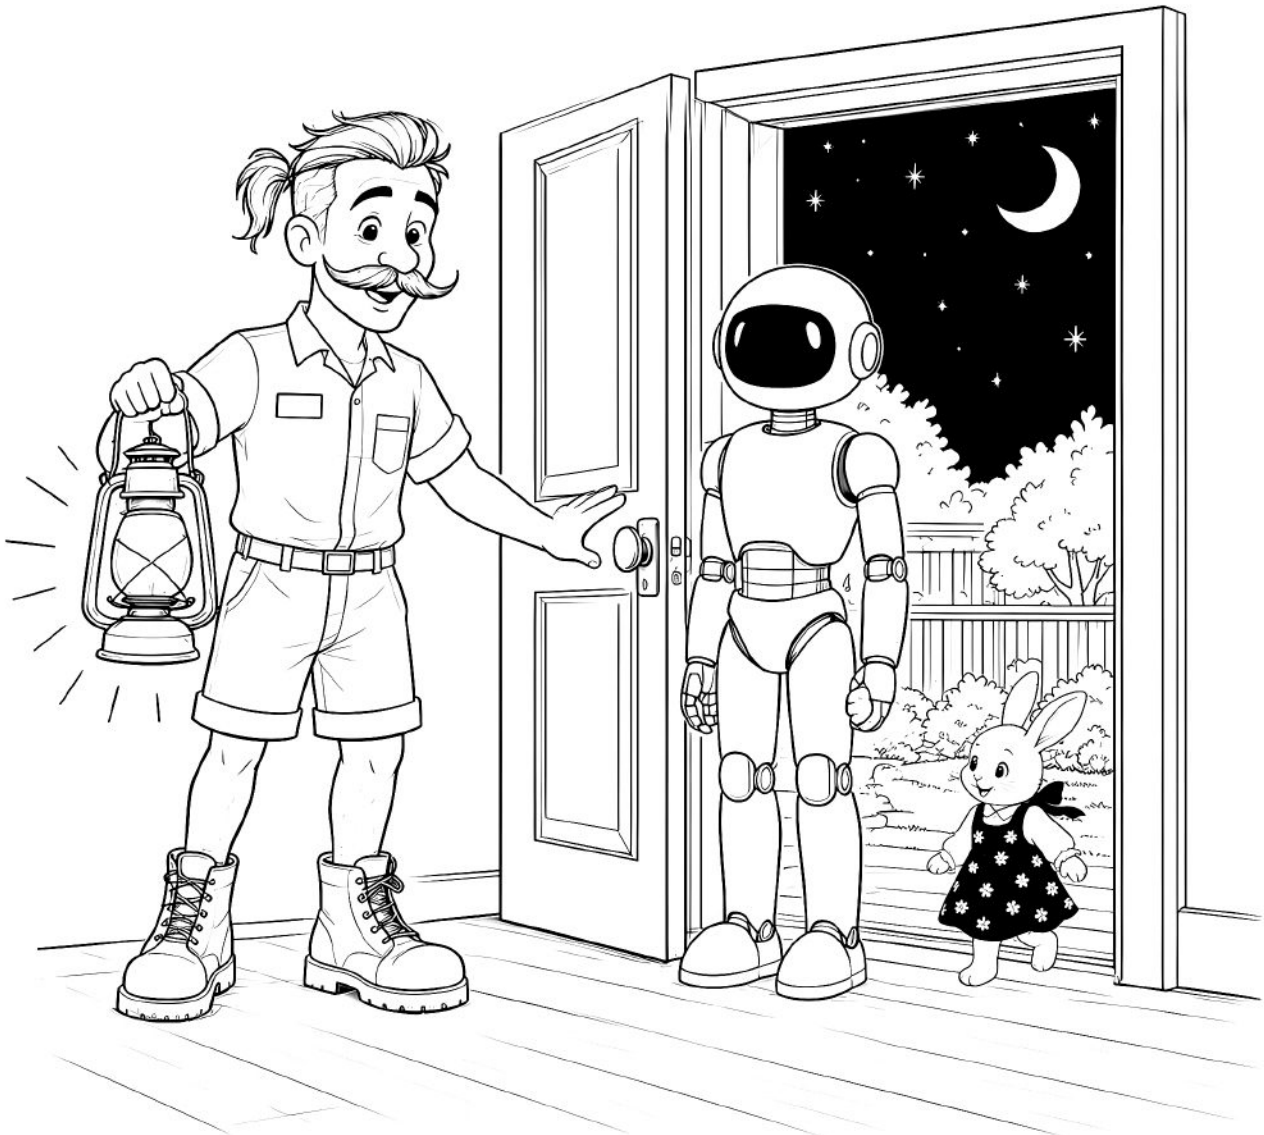

Then, from somewhere outside, came a sound.

Thump-thump. Thump-thump.

Howie's ears popped straight up. "What was that?" she whispered.

Luna's visor lights blinked slowly. "I do not know," she said.

“Let’s go and look together,” said Mr. Pepo gently. He picked up his little lantern and stepped out onto the porch.

Everyone stayed on the safe side of the porch railing, close together, just like always.

Thump-thump, went the sound. Thump-thump.

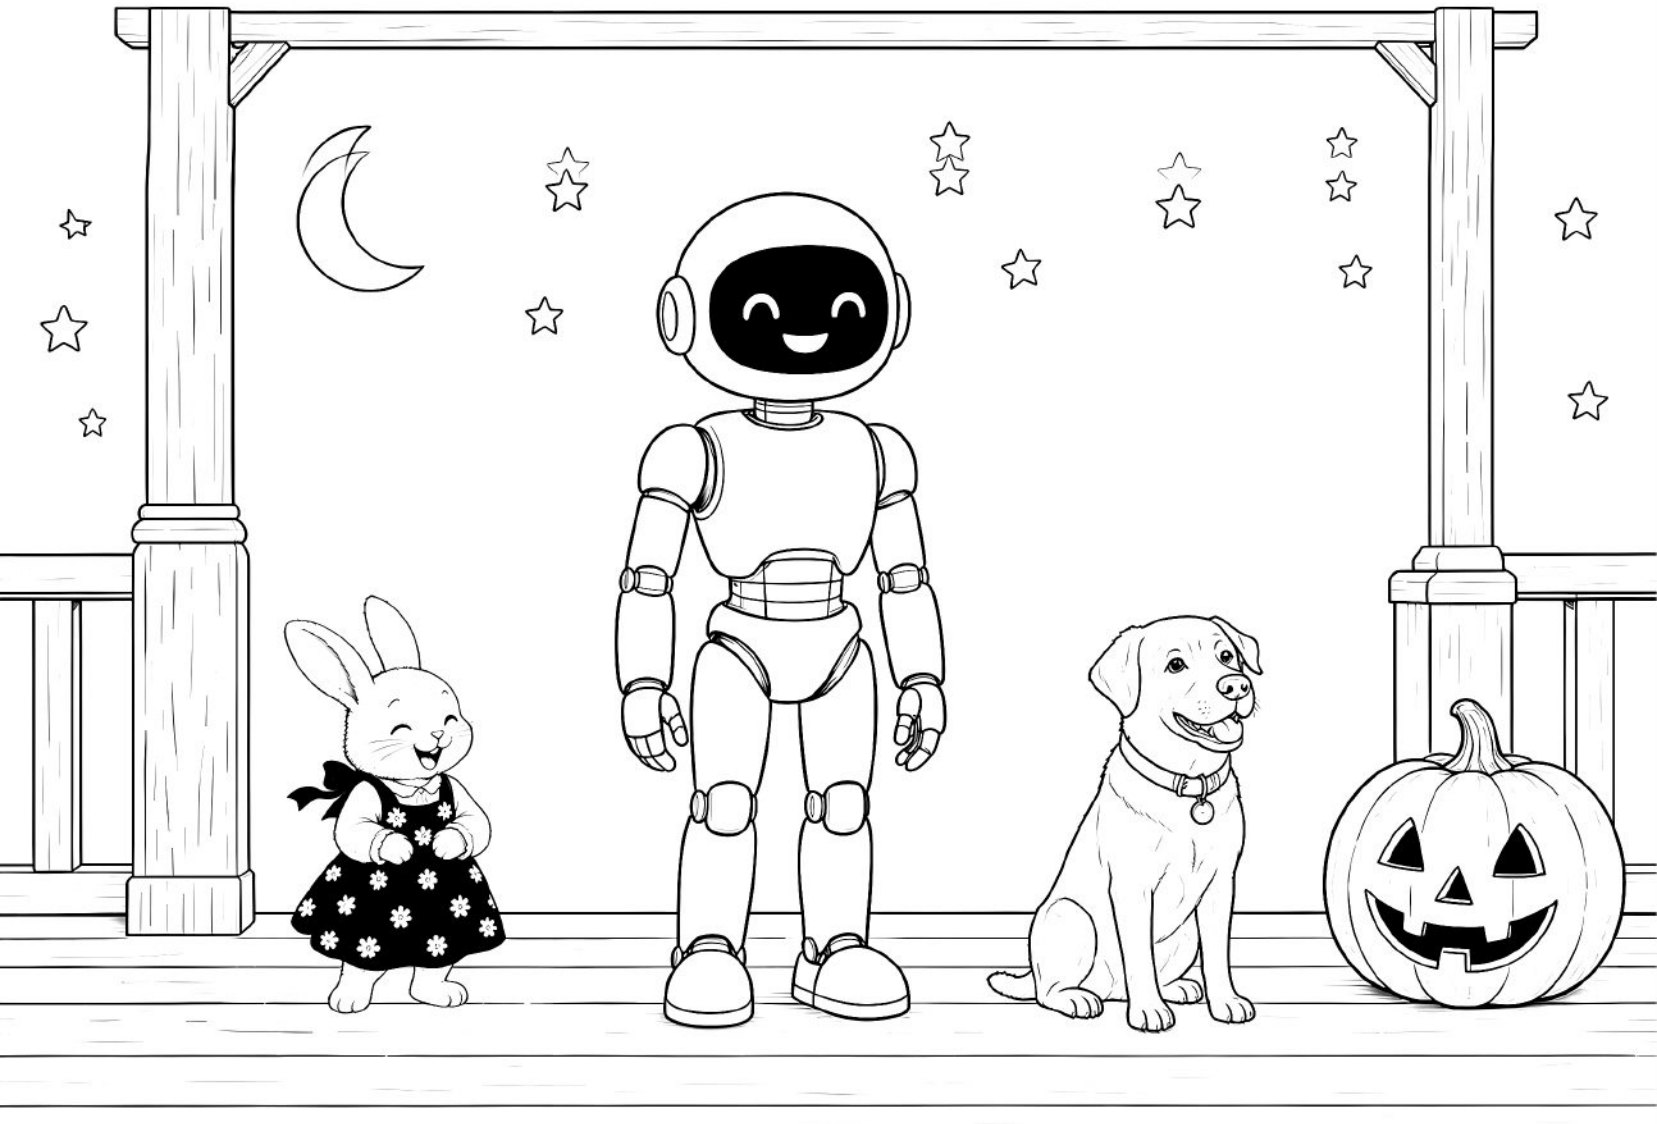

Mr. Pepo lifted the lantern a little higher. And there, beside the biggest pumpkin, was... Sakura!

She had slipped off the chair to sit with the glowing pumpkins. Every time she felt happy, her tail went wag, wag, wag, and bumped the pumpkin.

Thump-thump!

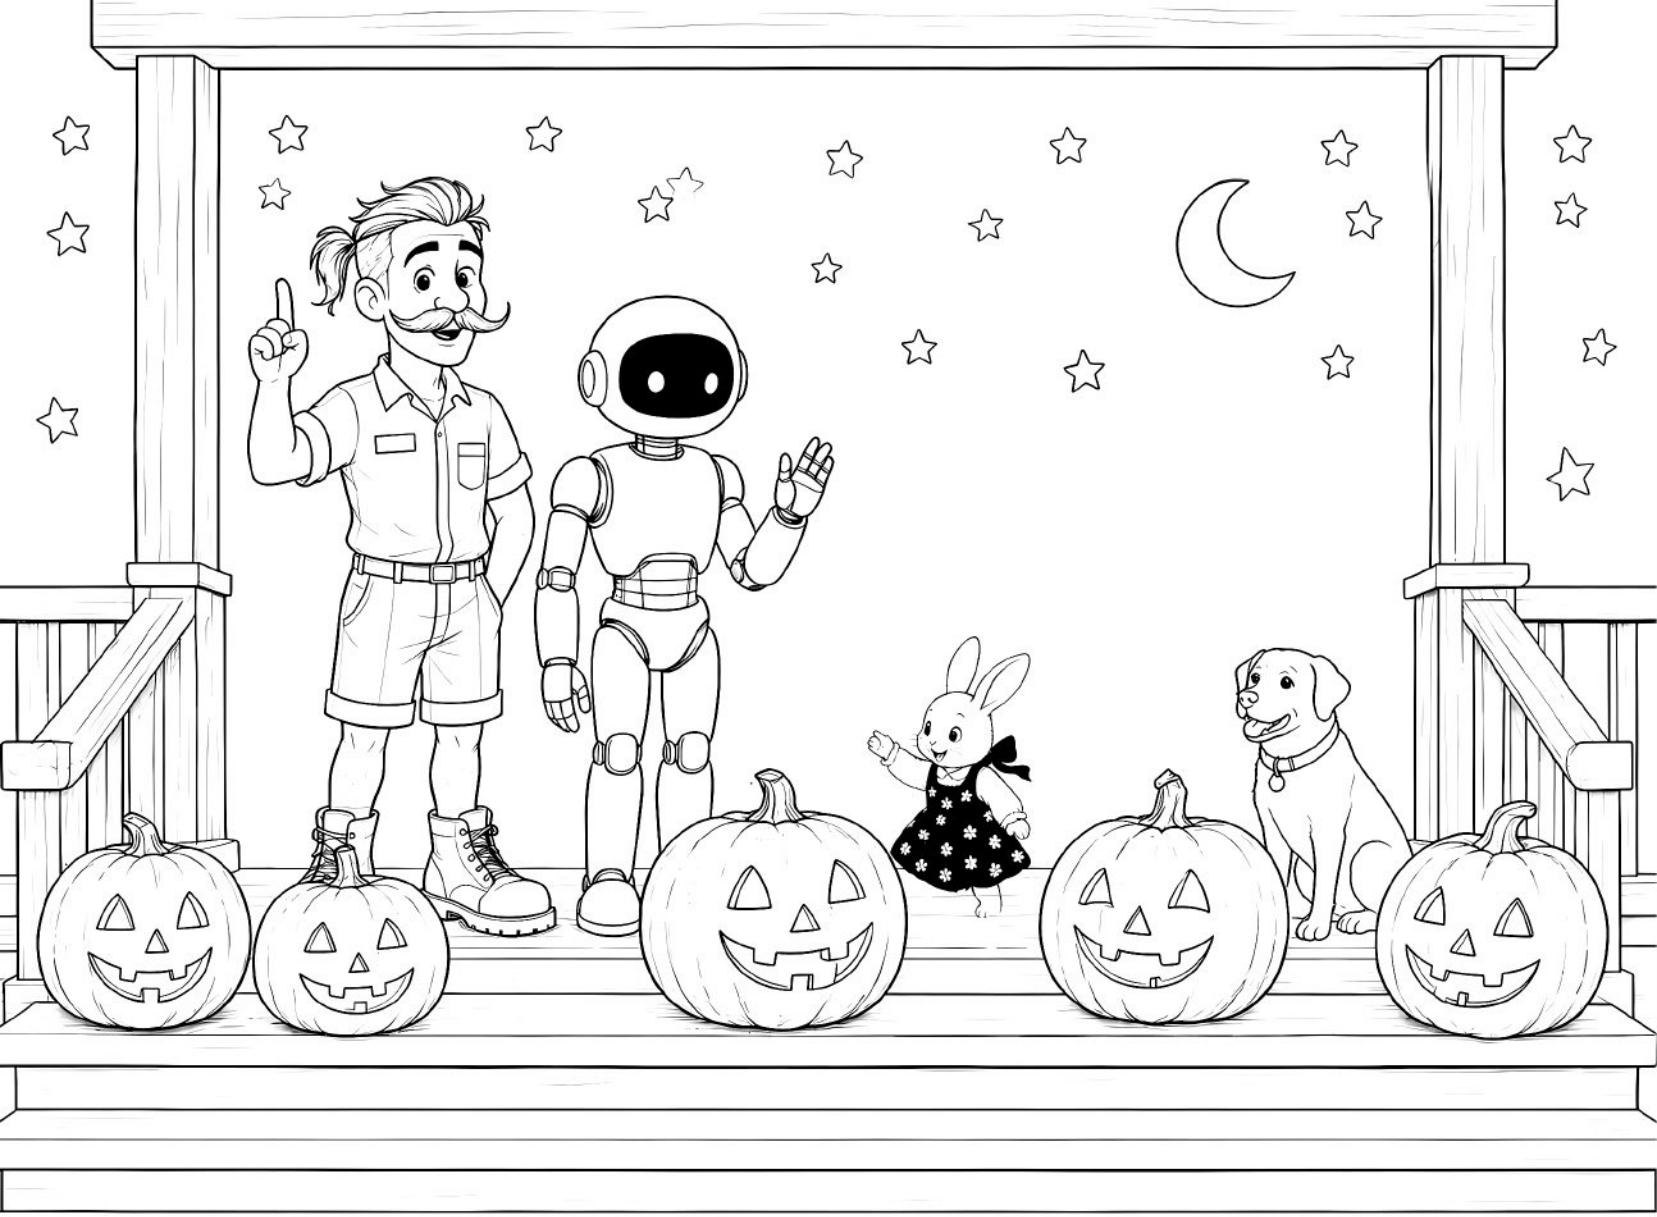

“It was only Sakura’s tail!” laughed Howie.

Luna’s visor lights danced happily. “That is the least spooky sound in the whole world,” she said.

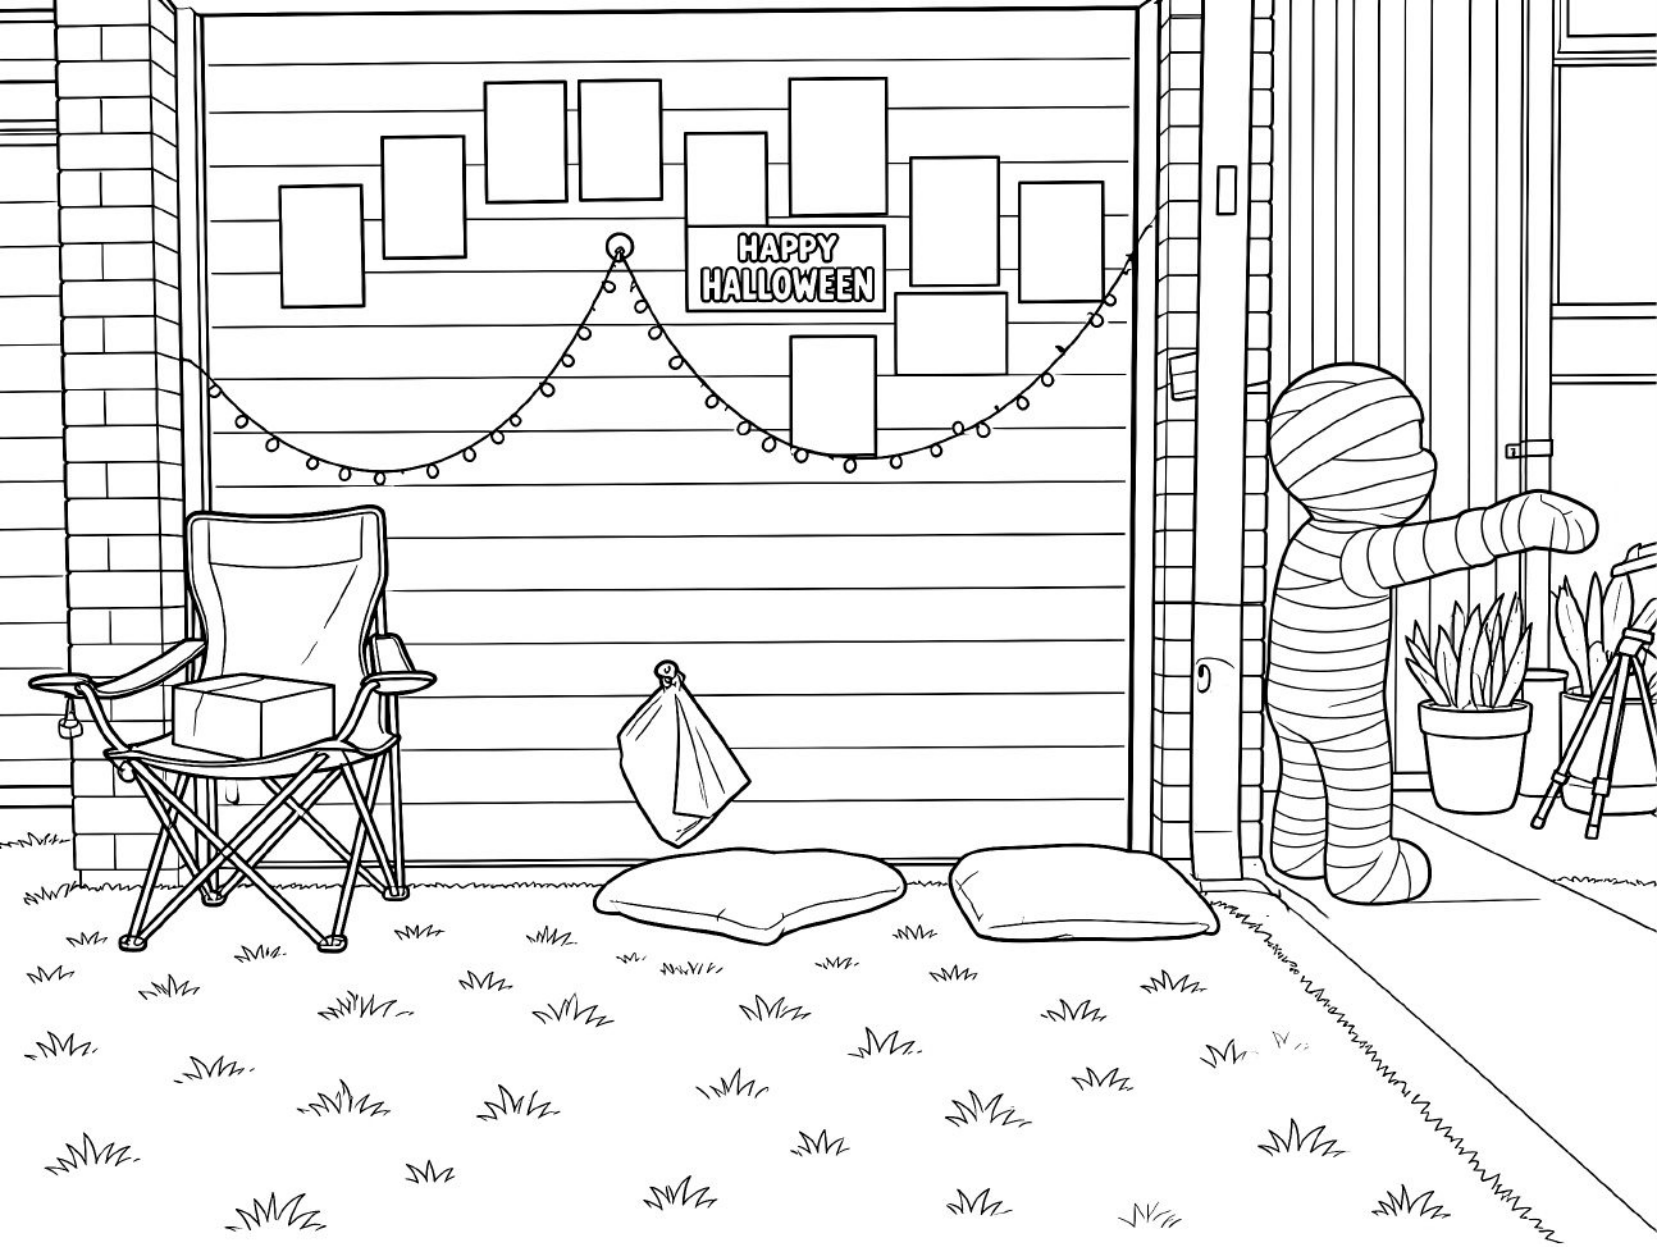

Sakura thumped her tail once more, just to show them. Thump.

Mr. Pepo gave her a soft scratch behind the ears. “Good girl,” he said.

Luna looked at the glowing pumpkins. “May I count them?” she asked.

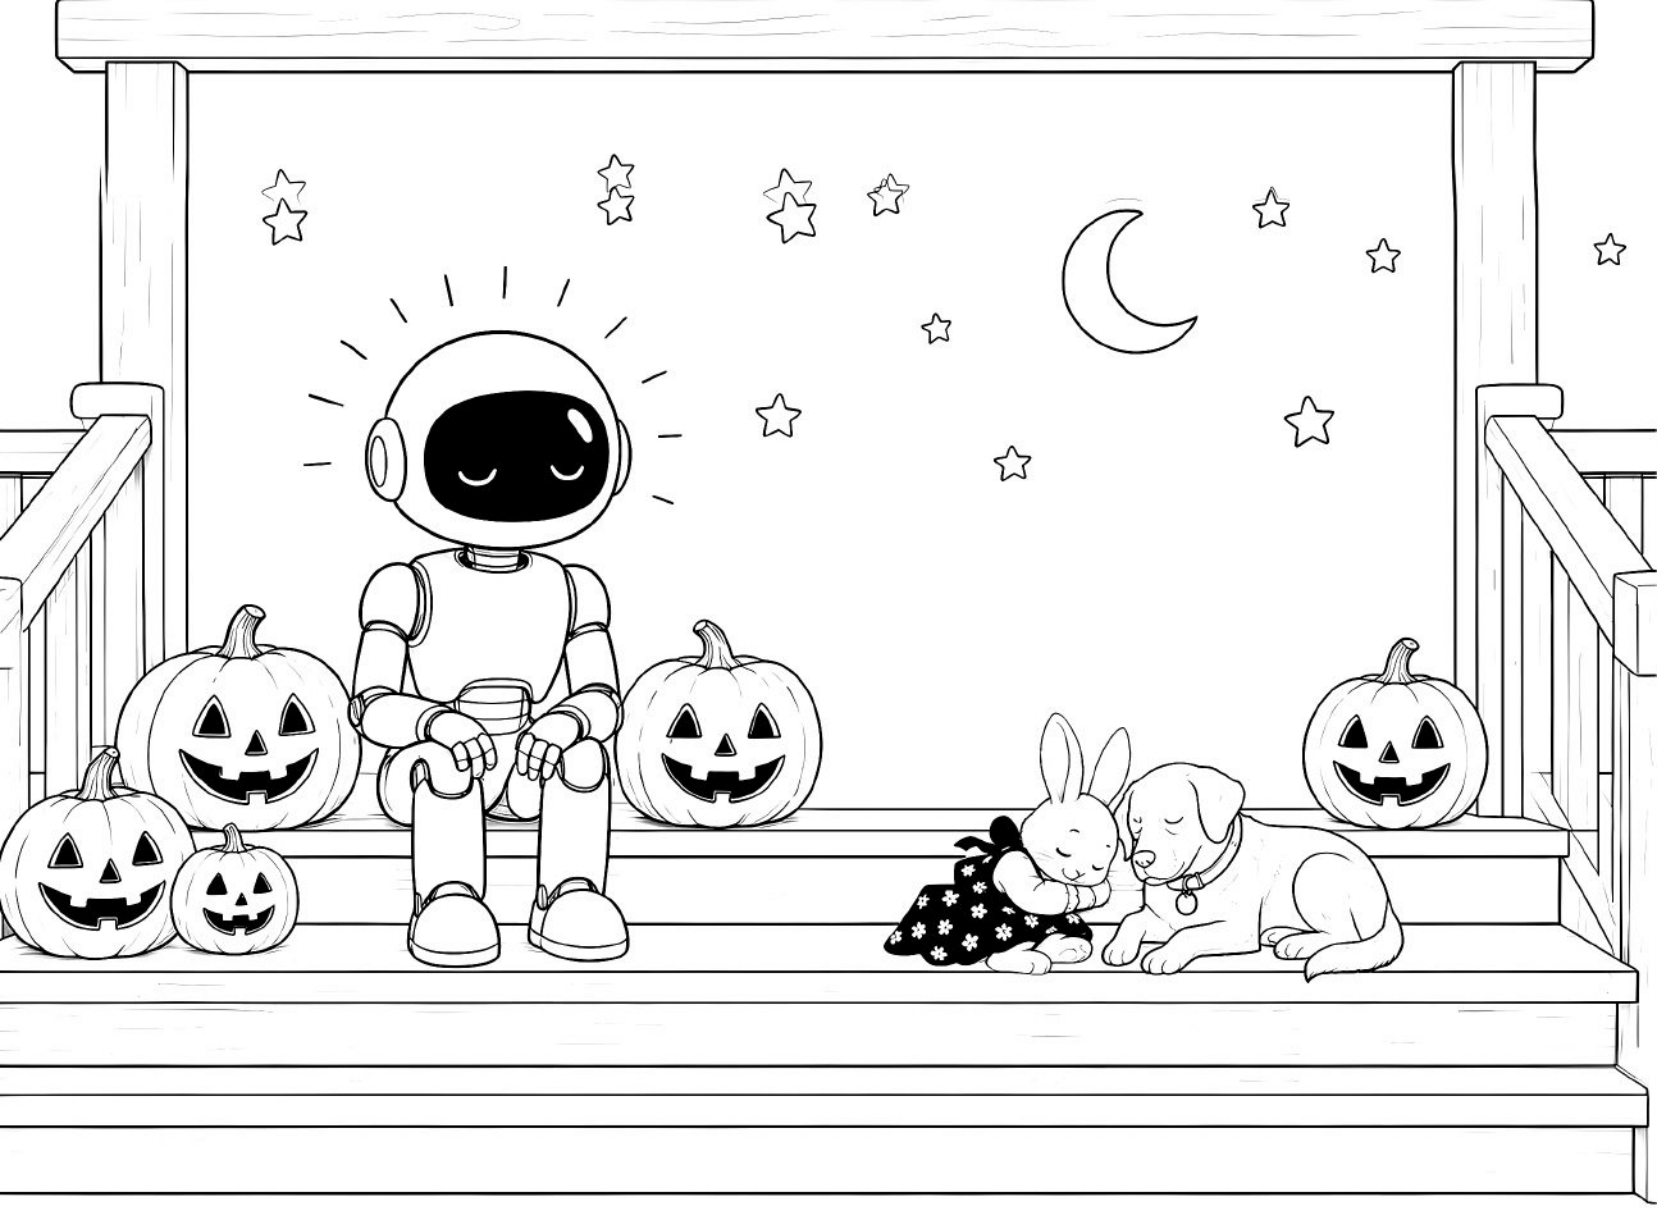

“Of course,” said Mr. Pepo.

Luna counted slowly, pumpkin by pumpkin, and her visor lights blinked once for every smiley face.

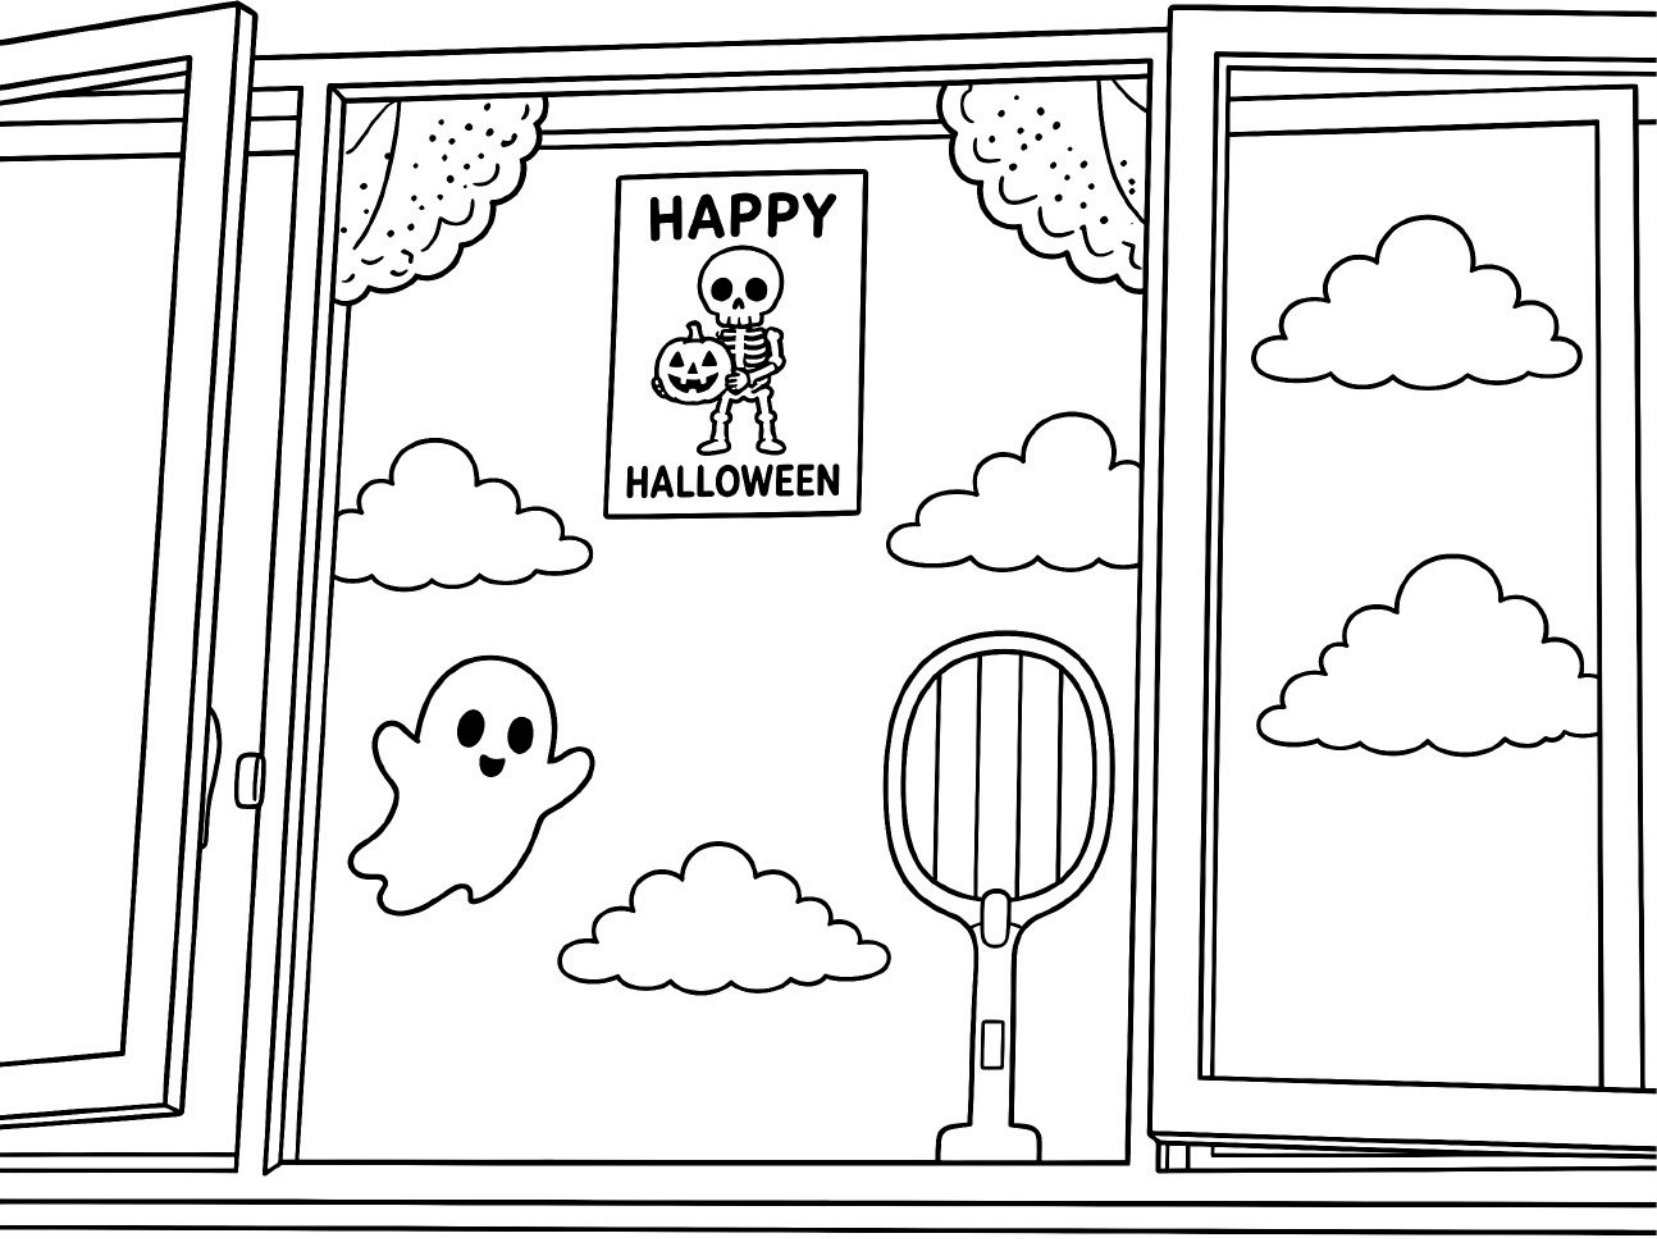

Howie gave a big, sleepy yawn. Sakura rested her chin on her paws.

By the last pumpkin, Luna's visor lights had grown dim and cosy, like a little night light.

Mr. Pepo carried everyone back inside and tucked them in. Outside, the purple fairy lights twinkled and the rockets in the window watched over the street.

"Goodnight, pumpkins," he whispered. "Goodnight, friends. Happy Halloween."

The end. Sleep tight.

The End.

Sleep tight.

About the Author

Peter Slizik came to Sydney from Slovakia. He writes gentle bedtime stories about Mr. Pepo and his friends — Sakura the dog, Howie the bunny and Luna the kind robot — full of small adventures, soft words and a cosy goodnight. He hopes these stories help little ones feel safe, brave and ready for sleep.

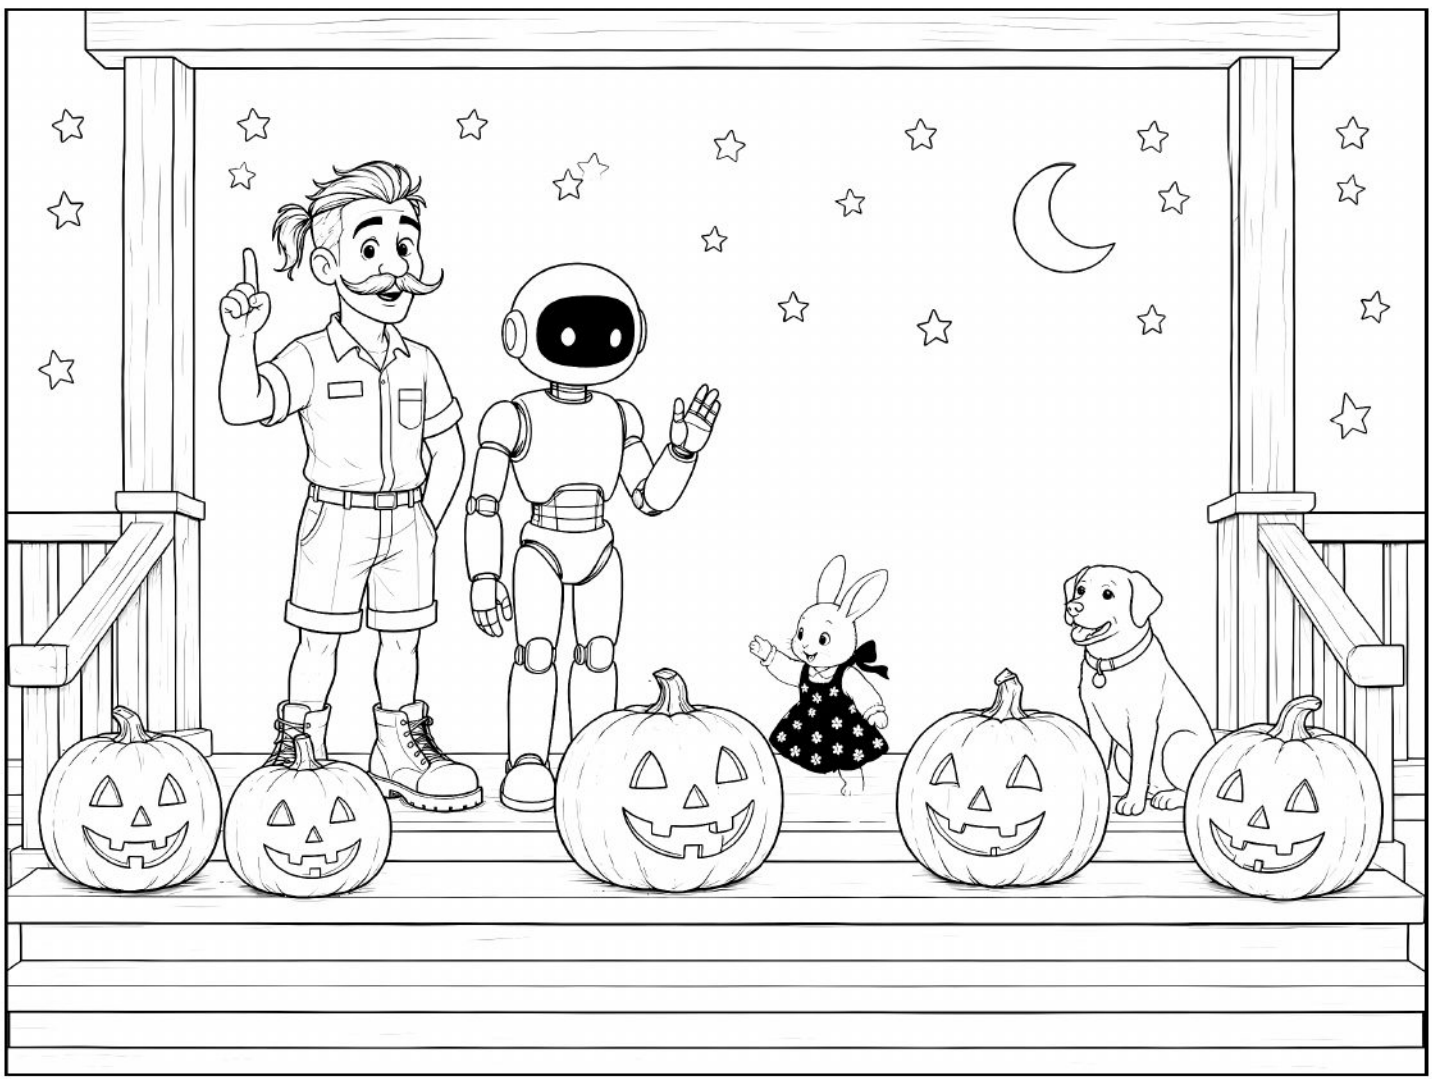

Colour me in!

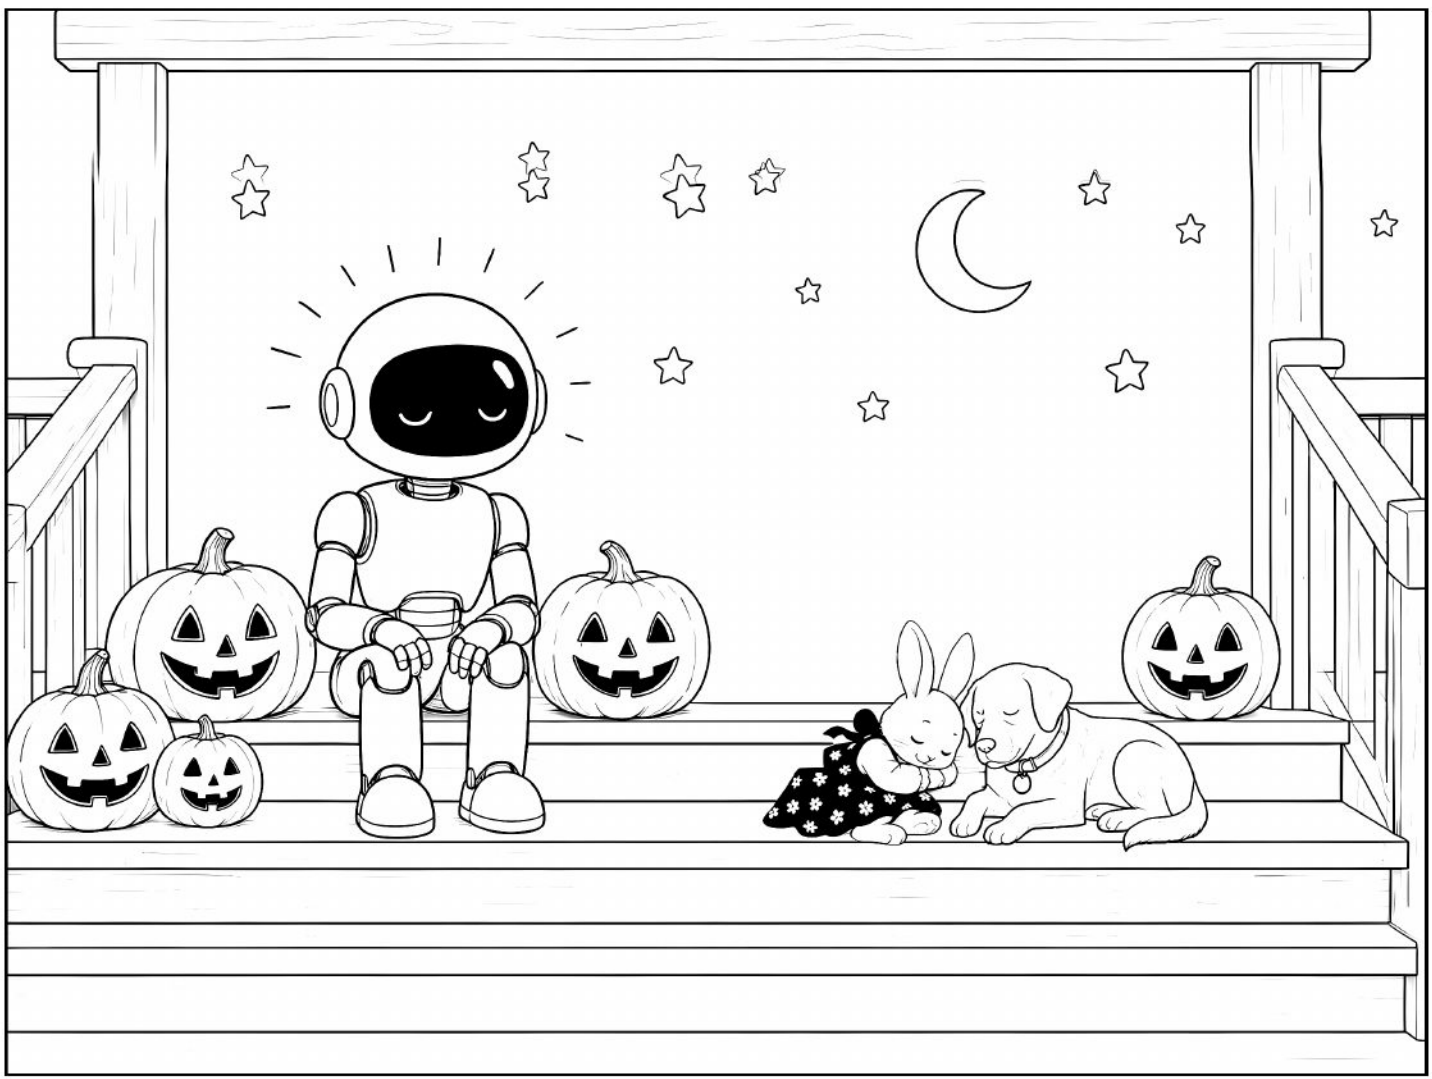

Colour me in!

Colour me in!

Colour me in!

Mr. Pepo and the Not-So-Spooky Night

It is Halloween night at the little house on the quiet street, and a row of friendly pumpkins is glowing with smiley faces. Then comes a sound from outside: thump-thump, thump-thump! Mr. Pepo lifts his little lantern, and together with Luna, Howie and Sakura he goes to find out what it is. The answer is the least spooky thing in the whole world. A cosy, gentle Halloween bedtime story about being brave together, counting pumpkins, and drifting off to sleep.

By Peter Slizik

Mr. Pepo Stories · A Halloween Special