A note from Peter

I come from Slovakia, and I live in Australia now. I'm a dad to Sakura, and I made Mr. Pepo, the light-bulb inventor, with his robot Luna and his dog Sakura.

My mind works differently. I call that a mental ability, not a disability. So when I look at children with minds like mine, I see inventors, builders and big thinkers, not problems to fix.

Being a dad to Sakura taught me that parents need somewhere to put it all down: the good days, the hard days, the questions for the next appointment. This journal is that place. Be kind to yourself. There are no wrong answers.

How to use this journal

- Print the daily page as many times as you like.
- Write about your child, and about you. Both matter.
- Notice patterns: what happened before a hard moment, and what helped.
- Bring the notes pages to school meetings, doctors and therapists.

About my child

My child's name:

What lights them up:

Their strengths and special interests:

Sensory things they love or avoid:

What calms them down:

How they tell us what they need (words, signs, behaviour):

About me, the parent

You matter too.

What I love about being their parent:

What I find hardest right now:

People who support me:

How I recharge, even for a few minutes:

What I need more of:

Weekly look back

What worked for our family this week:

Patterns I noticed:

Who helped us, and who we helped:

One thing we'd like to try next week:

Appointments and support

Doctors, therapists, school meetings and funding calls.

Who and when	What we talked about	Next step

Questions to ask next time:

What I want school, doctors and therapists to know

The most important thing about my child:

What works well at home:

What doesn't work for them:

Their goals, in their own words if possible:

What our family needs right now:

My child's page

Hand this page to your child. They can draw or write anything.

My name:

Draw yourself, your family, or your favourite thing:

I want grown-ups to know:

Free space

Draw, map your ideas, or write whatever your mind needs.
